

Contents

Foreword	1
Radomír Pleiner: the magister ferrariarum at 80 by H. Cleere	3
Examples of ancient bloomery furnaces and the development of iron metallurgy in Europe	29
A new perspective on the ancient slag-pit bloomery smelting furnace by K. Bielenin	31
The canal-pit and its role in the bloomery process: the example of the Przeworsk culture furnaces in the Polish territories by S. Orzechowski	41
The oldest iron-smelting furnaces in Denmark by A. Jouttijärvi and O. Voss	55
Some results and questions of the archaeometallurgy in Hungary by J. Gömöri	65
Some aspects of the development of Great Moravian iron metallurgy by V. Součopová, J. Merta and O. Merta	73
Norway as a bloomery iron producer by A. Espelund	87
Examples of research on ancient and early European iron forging	99
The chemical and metallographic analyses of the prehistoric ring from the "Bull's Rock" cave by K. Stránský	101

The craft of the Dacian blacksmiths by Ľ. Mihok and V. G. Kotigoroshko	107
Early medieval knife manufacture in Britain; a comparison between rural and urban settlements (AD 400–1000) by E. Blakelock and G. McDonnell	123
Metallography of knives from the medieval village of Hrdlovka and the burial ground of Zlončice, Bohemia by J. Hošek and P. Meduna	137
Technological traditions in the craft of the blacksmith in old Russian Shestovitsa by G.A. Voznesenskaya	153
Further metallographic studies on early armour from Churburg by A. Williams	163
From Soissons to Beauvais: the use of iron in some French cathedrals by P. Dillmann	173
Examples of involvement of archaeometallurgy into archaeolog- ical, historical and historical-technological research	197
Archaeological metallography in Russia: historiographic notes by V.I. Zavyalov	199
Archaeometallography in solving historical and cultural problems by V.I. Zavyalov, L.S. Rozanova and N.N. Terekhova	211

The multidisciplinary approach (archaeology and archaeometry) to bloom-smithing activities in France: examples of results from the last 20 years by P. Fluzin, S. Bauvais, M. Berranger, G. Pagès and P. Dillmann . 223

Examples of experimental archaeometallurgy 197

Cast iron from a bloomery furnace by P. Crew, M. Charlton, P. Dillmann, P. Fluzin, C. Salter and E. Truffaut 239

The Celtic sword: a source of practical inspiration
by J. Lang 263

Index of places 273

Summary in Czech (Souhrn) 277

Plates 287